IF you know the world is full of opportunities but aren't sure where you fit; if you are interested in working with Muslims (or Tibetans or anyone!) but have never had a Muslim friend; if you want to give your life to sharing the Gospel but need training and experience before striking out in a foreign country — we are looking for you! If you are ready to start walking, the Serve NYC internship is a good first step.

The Ministry Training Center invites eight young people each year to come gain confidence, experience, preparation, and skills in an ethnically diverse neighborhood in New York City. Join our team as we share the Gospel in our neighborhood, train workers for cross-cultural ministry, and pursue God's vision for the world. Your life will never be the same.

ALUMNI SAY My favorite thing about living in NYC is the mind-boggling variety of people. I loved having the world on my doorstep. • I grew to love the regular team meetings, both as the intern team and as the MTC team. I learned what it took to make a team work well together. • Being able to live in one place and regularly interact with Chinese, Bangladeshis, Tibetans, Nepalis, and Hispanics from various countries is really a unique experience. • The staff gave me responsibilities, expecting me to be able to fill them. Their confidence gave me confidence! • My time as an intern enlarged in my heart a place for cities and most of all for the people in them. LTO was a great experience and I'm grateful to have had the opportunity to grow in vision for the world through the classes and outreach. • I was blessed by the personal interest my mentors put into my life, building close relationships that remain today. •

MTC STAFF SAY I love watching interns expand their comfort zones as they make friends of people from different people groups and religions. •
